

The End is Near as NEOWIZ Signs Publishing Contract with JINO Games for Goodbye Seoul

- Inaugural chapter of Goodbye Seoul series unfolds in Seoul's Itaewon district as the world teeters on the brink of an apocalypse.
- Developed by a single developer at JINO Games, the game features a bold pixel-art style, challenging puzzles and tense platforming.

SEOUL - May 30, 2024 - NEOWIZ announced their publishing contract with solo developer JINO Games for their upcoming title, Goodbye Seoul. The puzzle platformer releases in Early Access later this year and is part of NEOWIZ's commitment to working with indie developers to deliver games with compelling narratives to all gaming platforms.

"Since the game's demo presence at various events in Korea last year, we've been impressed by the positive feedback it's garnered from players," said a NEOWIZ spokesperson. "We eagerly anticipate working closely with JINO Games on the successful global launch of Goodbye Seoul."

Goodbye Seoul is the debut installment of a planned trilogy that immerses players in a narrative-driven experience set amidst the impending apocalypse. Players must escape an eerie Seoul and uncover the mystery behind a secret government project to evacuate the planet. The demo version of the game is available through Steam and localized in English, Japanese, Korean, Chinese (Simplified), and Chinese (Traditional).

"I am delighted to collaborate with NEOWIZ and appreciate their unwavering support in publishing indie gems like Goodbye Seoul," said Kim Jinho, CEO, JINO Games.

"My game started as a passion project, and it feels surreal that we're now tracking toward an Early Access launch. I hope the first chapter of this series provides a memorable experience for players."

NEOWIZ's partnership with JINO Games aligns with its commitment to nurturing high-quality indie titles from around the world. NEOWIZ will continue its search for talented developers at major industry events. To learn more about NEOWIZ's publishing initiatives, please contact neowiz_team@zebrapartners.net
